Players in offside positions but not “Offside”

The shot by a team-mate (A) rebounds from the goalkeeper. (B) is in an onside position and plays the ball. (C) in an offside position is not penalised because he did not gain an advantage from being in that position because he did not touch the ball.

An attacker (C) is in an offside position, not interfering with an opponent, when a team-mate (A) passes the ball to player (B1) in an onside position who runs towards the opponents' goal and passes the ball (B2) to team-mate (C). Attacker (C) cannot be penalised because when the ball was passed to him, he was in an onside position.
